Preface

This 2022 issue of Current Nutrition & Food Science marks the journal’s eighteen anniversary. As the Editor-in-Chief and on behalf of my editors, I am delighted to announce the inaugural of the 2022 issue. The journal has now entered its eighteen volume, comprising the manuscripts on recent developments in food science and nutrition. This journal is intended to signify the growing needs of recent research in food and nutrition value and their impacts on health. The journal aims to become a voice for the food scientist community, addressing researchers and experts in areas ranging from food, nutrition to health and diseases in presenting verifiable methods, findings, and solutions. Over the past years, the journal has published articles on important topics and frontier research describing clinical nutrition and food science. We anticipate seeing a similar diversity of articles in 2022 as well.

With your support, we will continue to make progress by improving the quality of the journal, its website, and, most importantly, the future experience of our contributors and reviewers. We are expecting that the journal Current Nutrition & Food Science will soon be indexed in SCI, which will provide a better platform for the authors and the readers, with a comprehensive overview of the most recent developments in food science and nutrition.

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all the reviewers and the authors for their excellent work and contribution over the past years. The future of Current Nutrition & Food Science depends on the quality of work submitted by our contributing authors. Being the Editor-in-Chief, it is my great pleasure to invite the potential scientists and researchers worldwide to avail this opportunity and contribute their high-quality and excellent work to the journal. Thank you for selecting Current Nutrition & Food Science as your publication route.

Wishing all of you a very happy 2022 and hope for another year of successful publication of the journal. Looking forward to receiving more papers from you all!

Pau-Loke Show

Editor-in-Chief

Current Nutrition & Food Science

University of Nottingham Malaysia

Semenyih

Malaysia